

I failed a class, now what do I do???

If it is a required class (English, Math, Science, Social Studies, Phy Ed, or Health) . . .

1. Sign up for summer school - you can make up  $\frac{1}{2}$  credit (or one semester) of a course. It will count toward whichever semester you need. If you need both semesters, you'll still need to take one semester the following year.

You can take up to 4 classes (= 2 credits) in summer school. The morning classes are for required courses. The evening classes are for elective courses.

2. See your counselor about getting it into your schedule for the following year.

If it is an elective class (Agriculture, Art, Business, Computers, F/CE, Music, Tech Ed, or World Language). . .

1. You could sign up for summer school and take one of their elective offerings (either Study Skills or Career Planning).

2. You could retake the course the following year. This would be necessary if you want to take another course in that elective area and the course you failed is a prerequisite for another course.

3. You could take a different elective class the following year.
